

Number of Muggings Increases

by Jason Lee

A rash of street muggings have occurred the past month in Pasadena, and last week there were a number of alleged off-campus attacks on Caltech students.

According to Hal Ginder, head of Caltech security, there were 74 reported "street robberies" in Pasadena during October. "The number of robberies this past month is higher than normal," said Ginder.

Last week, according to Ginder, three Caltech undergrads were walking in the late evening on the corner of Del Mar and Hill, when a car pulled up and three individuals stepped out of the car.

The three assailants were described as "males, in their teens, and of black descent," according to reports filed later. The three individuals then ran up behind the three Caltech students and hit one in the face with a metal pipe, demanding money.

"The reported attacks have been quite vicious," said Louis Wilde, Master of Student Houses. "The mode has usually been a few people in a car driving around and searching for individuals to attack. Sometimes the attackers have assaulted victims before, during, and/or after the actual robbery, which usually involved money and wallets."

Ginder added that the attack car has been described to be a white, compact car. "The robbers drive around looking for victims. They will then pull up behind an individual, get out, attack, and drive away," he said.

Another alleged attack occurred last week on the corner of San Pasqual and California, but has not yet been officially reported, according to Ginder, who has only heard about it. According to Wilde, a graduate student who was walking alone during the late evening hours was assaulted, in a similar manner to the undergrads.

Ginder, however, stated that Caltech is not being singled out as a target. "We have no indication of that," said Ginder. "All I can advise to students is to be careful."

Both Ginder and Wilde said that there are ways to scare away potential attacks. If attacked, students should run towards the nearest house screaming and making as much noise as possible.

"If you're out during the late evening, be sure to walk in groups," said Wilde. "And if you are mugged, please report it to Caltech. There have been many attacks that haven't been reported that need to be."

Wilde added that students should be sensitive and aware to the problem. "Getting to a safe place and making noise dissuades attackers."

A Biathlete At Caltech

by Chris Campo

"You want the truth or you want a lie? The truth is I was trying to meet a girl." Craig Reynolds isn't describing his reasoning when accepting the job of Assistant Athletic Trainer at Caltech, of course. He is speaking of the reasons for his having started down the path to becoming a professional biathlete and triathlete.

So, you may well ask, what has this got to do with a girl? "We worked together at the school I was going to and I was asking her out. I'd say after class or after work, 'Let's go to get something to eat.'"

However, Craig's suggestions were always met with similar answers: "No, I gotta go run. No, I gotta go ride." So I thought, hey man, I'm never gonna get anywhere here! So I said, I'll go run with you. I'll go ride with you."

And thus the biathlete-to-be began his training with the sole object of carrying out his designs on a girl. But Craig got more than he bargained for. "I thought it would be a piece of cake, but it wasn't a piece of cake. I didn't think I'd actually have to go race! I was like 134th out of 300 people. I had no idea if I could even finish. I'd never done all three (running, cycling and swimming) at one time before."

Unlike many biathletes/triathletes, Craig didn't have an extensive background as a runner, cyclist or even swimmer. "I played a little water polo. I used to race a little BMX bike when I was younger - yeah I was awesome." But the BMXer was destined for still greater things. He became good enough at triathlons so that even after he broke up with the girl who had started him down the road, he stuck with it.

Craig has been racing for about 3 years now, and two of those years have been seriously successful ones. "I was kinda hanging out, a run-of-the-mill kinda guy and then all of a sudden at Desert Princess (a prestigious biathlon in Palms Springs), my first biathlon ever, I went from nobody to tenth! And I thought, hey maybe I can do this. At the following race in Saint Croix (a grueling triathlon on the island of Saint Croix) I won that - top amateur."

So how did Craig Reynolds, pro multi-sport athlete, wind up working in the Caltech Athletic center? "I had a friend who used to work here. The first time I had a stress fracture I couldn't race, so I thought, ah, I've gotta find some work. But I wanted something that didn't take up my whole day so I could still train in the mornings." Craig began working as Assistant Trainer to Jaye Tashima and stayed on even after his stress fracture healed. Why? "I would go nuts if all I did was race. You've gotta have something more to do."

So just what comprises a typical day for Craig Reynolds? "I get up at 5 o'clock. I grab something to eat, like a bagel. I sit on the toilet seat and eat my bagel. Then I go out for a bike ride - typical mileage would be like 60 miles a day... come home, get something to drink real quick and usually go for a short run, a 4-miler. It depends (on the day). Hop in the shower, come here (to Tech), go home and run 6 miles then eat dinner." Craig spends the time between 1:00 and 6:30 pm at Caltech. "8:30 I eat dinner, go to sleep at 9-9:30."

And so Craig finds himself immersed in a scene very different from that of tri and biathlons: the Caltech scene. "It's so different than any other school I've worked at. I only see half the student-body, only the people who are into athletics, and I don't have any contact with the rest of them. I only get half the picture."

Of the people Craig does see in the training room, Craig says, "the guys that are here have got it pretty tough. It seems like with homework and stuff you guys put a lot of time into it." The unbelieving trainer often hears from Caltech students, "God, I can't believe you get up at 5 in the morning, and I'm going: you guys are NUTS staying up until 4 o'clock in the morning doing a problem set! That's insane! I would never do that. You guys do the same thing I do just in a different arena."

So much for the story of a BMXer-turned-pro-biathlete. What comes next? "It's hard for me to say. When there comes a time when I can't be in the top 10... I

CRIME AND INCIDENT BEAT

Crime tip: The Pasadena Police Department has reported seventy-four street robberies or muggings in the past month. The police suggest that if you are accosted by anyone while off campus, running to a nearby house for help could dissuade the assailants. Pay attention to others around you on the streets.

- 11/4 The license plate of a student's vehicle parked on San Pasqual, just north of Ruddock House, was removed. The Alabama tag read 'Caltech'.
- 11/5 A member of the Caltech staff noticed scratches near the handle of her vehicle, which was parked in the Chester Parking Lot. Apparently entry into the vehicle was attempted.
- 11/6 A faculty member parked his car next to the trash bin on the north side of Beckman Institute, and returned to find a vertical crease in the driver's side door, which was apparently caused by a door of the trash bin.
- 11/8 A student left his keys in a cubicle book holder of the Caltech Bookstore, and found them missing upon leaving the store. The keys included his apartment and car keys.
- 11/9 Security officers found four people on top of the Central Plant cooling tower around midnight. The four were warned that they would be arrested for trespassing if found on the roof again.
- 11/9 A student left his bicycle parked and locked on the south side of Booth Computer Center. The bicycle was found missing upon his return.
- 11/9 A typewriter was stolen sometime over the weekend from room 1 of Kellogg Lab. The door is keyed to a Medeco lock, and there was no evidence of forced entry.
- 11/9 A faculty member returned to her office in room 104 of Kellogg Lab and found several items missing from the desk. The office is keyed to a South Campus Master.
- 11/9 A student returned to his office after the weekend and found six dollars in change and a tape missing from his desk drawer. The office is keyed to a South Campus Master.
- 11/10 Several students were walking back to campus when three teenagers approached them from behind, near Del Mar and Hill, and hit one of the students with a lead pipe. Money was taken from each. The Pasadena Police have been notified.
- 11/13 A person was pushing her child in a stroller on the walkway north of Parsons/Gates when a suspect lunged at her dog with an umbrella. She was forced to physically shield her child and her dog from the assailant.

Total value of stolen or missing items: $616

Concerns about Security

To the Editors,
Last Saturday, I was the victim of a mugging. It was a disturbing experience, but not nearly as disturbing as the response of Caltech security to the situation.

One of the guards on duty that night had just started work here, so I would expect him to be unprepared. However, his response was the most reasonable. He was actually concerned about getting me some medical attention, but his supervisor wanted us to go upstairs and fill out some forms. Fortunately, I wasn't seriously injured, but he had no way of knowing that. (I had a couple of broken and dislocated teeth and was bleeding profusely.)

They had trouble finding the

Ricketts Thanks Kim West

Letter to the editors:

I'd like to take a moment to thank Kim West, the new Director of Resident Life, for her consideration of the Ricketts Hovse pot-fires. At a time when the administration as a whole seems to feel not only comfortable but OBLIGATED to dictate what is right for the students despite their protests, Ms. West took time out to listen and give us a fair chance.

Is it possible that she is setting a precedent of treating the students as mature, reasonable people? I certainly hope so! We do not resent guidance, advice, or concern for our well-being. We CAN be talked to, and reasonable, mutually agree-

MOSH's phone number (one of the first numbers that they need in an emergency). Also, they didn't tell us (my roommate, a friend, and I) that they don't contact the police. When my roommate asked if the police should be called, one of the guards said, "Oh yeah, that might be a good idea." The guards didn't even have the Pasadena Police phone number handy, they had to call information for it.

Considering all of the hazardous chemicals and equipment on campus, not to mention random violence, I can't feel very safe about Caltech security protecting us. Something must be done to improve the situation.

able solutions to problems can be found, but the members of the administration have to be willing to listen. Taking surveys and processing them until they tell you everything's hunkey-dorey is not the way to do it. Just take a few seconds to consider what the students say once in a while.

Ms. West did, and with the addition of some reasonable safety precautions, Ricketts Hovse will be able to continue a tradition over 30 years old. The students are happy, and so is she. That's the way it should be.

Thanks again, Kim!

Food Committee Minutes C.E.T.F. Meeting

Report of the Food Committee November 15, 1990

Present: Emily Wen (Chair), Gary Hindoyan (BC), Dan Frumin (Bl), Jon Lange (Da, Secretary), Chris Myers (Ll), Wayne Davis (Pa), Matt Baker (Ru).

Salad bar: We finally have a salad bar, with real toppings and everything! It's available at lunch and dinner; if you want a salad at dinner, feel free to go into the kitchen and help yourself to a salad. Better salad dressing is coming, too: Bleu Cheese is gone; it has been replaced with Ranch dressing. Also, a new recipe for Italian dressing will be making its premiere appearance next week. House waiters: be nice to your house members. Let them go into the kitchen for salad.

Menu changes: Nov 22: BBQ Chicken instead of Chicken Chronicle. Nov 27: Quiche instead of Sweet & Sour Pork; Veggie Quiche for vegetarian. Dec 5: Stuffed Grape Leaves for vegetarian.

Chili: Gary and two members of the Committee went to Souplantation to try their chili. Gary liked it and is changing his chili recipe to match theirs.

Available on request: You can get cheese sticks at lunch anytime if you ask for them.

Yogurt: Yogurt is expensive, folks! Please try to reduce your consumption of yogurt to those times that you just can't eat anything else.

Food experiments: New dishes will no longer just appear; they will first be tested by the Food Committee. If we don't like it, you'll never see it.

Contract talk: Gary is promising that, if we renew his contract, he'll only increase prices 4% next year, which is significantly less than the cost-of-living increase. So, effectively, he's cutting prices for next year.

Specific comments: Monday's vegetarian dish, the potato and cheese sauce, wasn't a real entree. Next time, it will have vegetables and sauce to go with it. The soups have been good.

Things to look for: We're going to be seeing a new bread next week (probably Wednesday): soft bread sticks. Look forward to it. Individual boxes of cereal will slowly be disappearing, being replaced with bulk cereal dispensers. We will be having small pizzas every now and then for lunch. As soon as the current supply of fruit punch is gone, we'll be getting grape juice in the juice machines. We'll be seeing specialty salads once a week. There will be more pasta dishes and fewer rice and potato dishes. We'll still have some rice and potato dishes, though.

Next week's meeting is Wednesday, not Thursday.

Are you bugged by seeing sprinklers water swampy grass or even sidewalks? Would you like to start recycling but aren't sure how? Do you at least suffer from a vaguely uneasy feeling that civilization can't continue to gobble up oil and other resources forever at present rates?

The Caltech Environmental Task Force will be meeting on Wednesday, November 21, at noon in Winnett Clubroom One. Join us in helping the Caltech community become a more environmentally conscious campus, and help us encourage the administration to adopt policies that enhance local and global environments. For further information, contact David MacKay, ext. 2805 (MACKAY(at)HOPE.CALTECH.EDU) or Debbie Bradbury, ext. 3630.

Don't worry about being a few minutes late, just grab that delicious, nutritious, and already-paid-for-so-what-the-hell-you-might-as-well-eat-it board-plan lunch and bring it to the meeting!

I got a postcard from my mom today.

It was from San Francisco, where she went for a piano teachers conference.

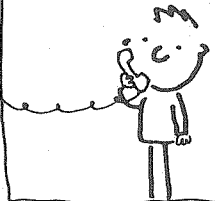

She said she was having a great time riding trollies seeing the Golden Gate Bridge and stuff.

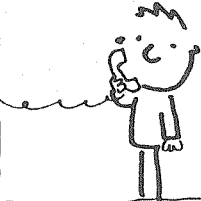

I couldn't read it in the top right-hand corner because the postmark covered up her writing.

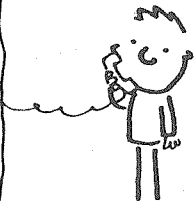

Today I got a call from the manager of the copy store.

He said he wanted me to come down for an interview.

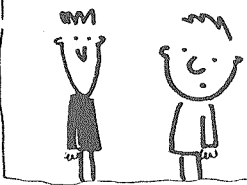

(I applied for a job there the other day with Steve.)

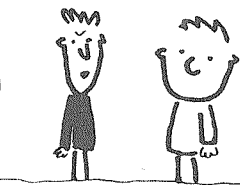

I went there and met the manager. His name was Hal.

Today I told Steve I got a job at the copy store.

He said it was no fair that we both applied and only I got the job.

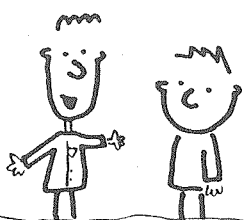

Then Tony said, "Steve, why would you even want a peon job like that? You need to start thinking management."

"My brother," Tony said, "is manager of a shoe store and makes more money than all of us!"

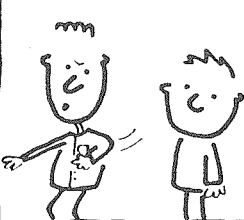

Today Tony told me about a dream he had last night.

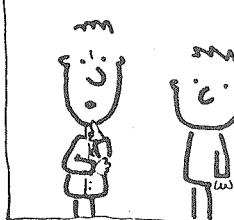

"It was wild, Jim, you wouldn't have believed it," he said.

He said he had a race car that could take him anywhere in the world in 2 seconds.

"But the weird thing is," he said, "I only went to my Aunt Helen's house and a meat-packing plant."

I went to work at the copy store today.

Hal, the manager, showed me how to run a big copy machine and got me started making 3,000 copies of something.

After about 3 minutes, the machine got jammed.

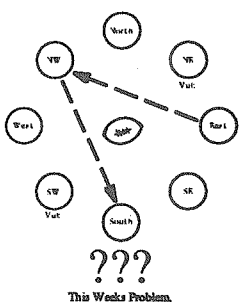

I went looking for Hal so he could show me how to fix it, then a customer told me her machine was jammed and asked me to fix it.

Upcoming Movies With Varoujan Gorjian

by Varoujan Gorjian

Godfather: Part III is probably the most anticipated movie of the season. The previous two parts have won academy awards for best motion picture and everyone is wondering how good this third one is going to be.

The preview screenings showed that the movie needed still more editing and Paramount pictures was worried that the film would not be ready by the Christmas day release date, but the editing was finished in time and the movie will be released on Christmas. The movie ran over time and over budget, as did the previous two, and in its final form is about three hours long, as were the first two, now it is up to audiences to judge how good the movie is.

Closer to release is Predator 2, which will be out next Wednesday in time for Thanksgiving. None of the original cast reappears, (unless you count the Predator, who once again is played by Kevin Peter Hall). Yet the cast that they do have is fairly impressive with Danny Glover, Maria Conchita Alonso, Bill "Game Over Man!" Paxton, and Gary Busey. The story is set in Los Angeles in 1997 as the Predator arrives in the urban jungle. Apparently this time the Predator is in town "with a few days to kill." For those who have been following the Dark Horse Comic series Aliens vs. Predator, the movie makers have a reference to that conflict.

The Predator is fond of trophies of his kills, i.e. skulls of his victims. In the movie, if you look closely, you will see in the Predator's trophy case the unmistakable skull of an Alien.

A bit more down the line, opening on November 16, is Rocky V. Now what can one say about this, the only other non-slasher movies that have generated this many sequels in recent times have been Star Trek and Planet of the Apes both of which were not very well received the fifth time around. The James Bond series is the only one to have been successful over a long period. Needless to say, Rocky is no James Bond. Supposedly Rocky V is closer in tone to the first movie but preview reaction has not been very favorable. Stallone has stated that this will be the last Rocky movie, but probably he should never say never.

Another Movie to look forward to is Kindergarten Cop with Arnold Schwarzenegger, directed by Ivan "Ghostbusters" Reitman who recently directed Schwarzenegger in Twins. This comedy is one of the few non sequels that is out there. Schwarzenegger is hot off his huge hit Total Recall and was very successful in comedy with Twins, so this movie should satisfy Schwarzenegger fans.

Two other off beat non sequels are in the offing for this Christmas. Dan Aykroyd's Valkenavia and Tim Burton's Edward Sissorhands. Valkenavia is the story of a yuppie couple, played by Chevy Chase and Demi Moore, who stumble into an obscure East Coast town where a 106 year old Justice of the Peace presides over a nightmarish group of comic/frightening inhabitants (like Giant Infant Body/mutant baby) and doles out death sentences for traffic violations.

This is definitely a movie that is different and hard to describe. Aykroyd has not had a hit since Ghostbusters II, and this time he has not only written and acted in this movie, but he directed it as well. Edward Sissorhands is Time Burton's first movie since directing Batman. It stars Wynona Ryder and Johnny Depp and it is sort of a Frankenstein story about Edward Sissorhands (The name being self explanatory). Preview showings of this movie have produced mixed reviews, so it remains until its opening to see how good the movie is, although it certainly shouldn't be difficult to top a bungled mess like Batman.

Finally, looking farther into the future, for all I care, Bill and Ted can get to hell, and they will be, in the sequel to Bill and Ted's Excellent Adventure, tentatively titled Bill and Ted Go To Hell. Shooting begins with the original cast and writers this January, and it is slated for a Summer '91 release.

On the Star Trek front, the latest word seems to be that Nicholas Meyer, the man behind the best Star trek movie: Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan, is slated to write and direct Star Trek VI. The shooting begins in March with a tentative Christmas release date. This summer is definitely going to be another sequel summer with Terminator II, Alien III, Short Circuit 3, and The Lost Boys II.

SURF Speakers' Bureau

- We Want You!

by Eugene Lit

The SURF Speakers' Bureau is alive and running!!! Despite the fact that Jeanie Cass is in Boston, Carolyn, Joan and I are going to keep the Bureau going this year. We hope that with the help of both new and old members, we will be able to actually increase our activities.

The SURF Speakers' Bureau is composed of students interested in giving talks to various Caltech and community groups. These talks vary from technical presentations for a science-oriented audience, to more informal talks for community groups, or any other group which requests a speaker. The purpose is for the students to practice and develop their presentation skills, and to provide a source of student speakers to the various departments at Caltech which request them. Also, we hope to have some professors knowledgeable in public speaking to come in and give us some pointers.

Perhaps one of the most exciting aspects of the SURF Speakers' Bureau is the very active teaching program in local schools. Last year, students went out to teach classes from grades 3 and up a number of science and science-related topics. The talks were meant to stimulate an early interest in science, especially in minority kids or girls who may not otherwise become interested, and were never very technical. We have had many requests from schools to once again provide these teachers, and we hope to expand the program to include new schools. The talks were generally about one hour long, and students were free to decide how many times they wanted to present a talk. Although some talks were only presented once, others were given to three or four different schools.

If you are at all interested, you are welcome to come to our first meeting this Sunday at 5 pm in room 1E of Dabney hall (across from the SURF office). If possible, call me at 564-8108 to let me know that you are coming. (There is NO obligation, and you will NOT be billed later...) If you are interested, but cannot make the meeting, just call me and leave a message, or drop me a note at 1-60.

Cinco Bitchin' By Ham Stinkin'

Long after the polls were closed at Winnett, the race for the Western representative to the North American Collegiate's was on. Eight Caltech students - Craig "Wiener Dude" Smith, Scott "Jazz 'Beef Chief' bo!" Harris, John "Bayou Brawler" Gass, Doug "Flako" Peterson, Kurt "Rolling Thunder" Storm, Randy "Shrimp 'Ace of Spades' Wimp" Stevenson, Matt "Killer" Maloney, and Raif "Dee 'Fish Pro Tem' jam" Majeed - unofficially beat competition from Stanford, Washington, and UCLA to play for the third year in a row in the collegiate championship in Atlantic City.

After South opened play with a ragged underhand serve, Northeast followed with a looping set directly across the circle of play. Southwest bobbled the ball slightly, but there was more than "meats" the eye! West, totally unprepared for a misplay, inadvertently set the pigskin back to Southwest off his shoulder. Southwest capitalized, unloading a blazing spike at the unsuspecting North. Sometimes pre-set plays are sneakier than congressmen!

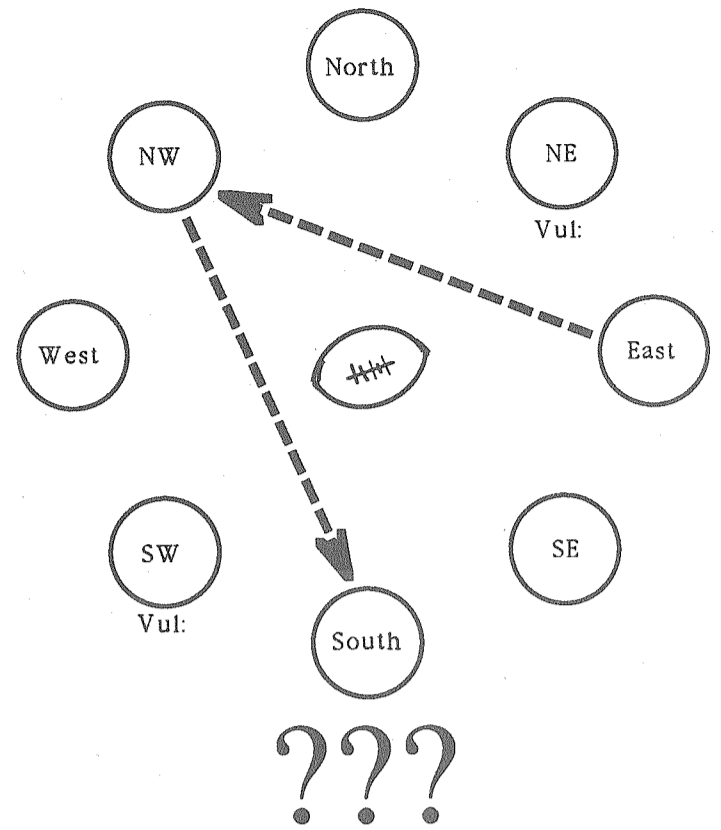

At this point the serve came to Northwest, who had to decide how to play this critical juncture. Serving to his left would leave the round in the hands of revenge-minded North, who, having been spiked once, was not to be trusted. However, serving to his right would allow West, a left-hander, to implement the trusty Rebound Pitchback, which could lead to a bitter defeat at the hands of Southwest.

But wait! There was a clue in the hitting. If a vulnerable player could be found, a play could be made! Looking across the circle of scrimmage, he notices East, visibly weak. Using the little-known Lateral Gambit, he feigns to the left and launches right. East is stuck! No amount of agonizing will help him now. He watches helplessly as the ball is brought to him for the fourth hit. He pops the ball feebly into the center of the circle and implements the infamous Cower in Fear defense.

But wait! West and Southwest collide on the spike, and the ball plummets toward North, thus ending the round. Realize making 6 is worth 95 out of 100 match going down is only worth 20. East is traumatized by the last play. Going into the final round, he has the serve. Opting to toss rather than hit on the serve allows South to open the counting. In a high arching trajectory, the ball tumbles end-over-end toward Northeast.

The protagonist in our tale opts to intercept the ball, sending it once again skyward. East immediately sees the chance for victory. Perhaps he can succeed where Custer could not! After some degree of sleight-of-hand, the ball arrives on the doorstep of West. Is anybody home? Certainly, and West had more up his sleeve than his elbow pads. Some spectators said they heard the air tear as the ball careened toward Southeast. A bullet to the midsection! Les jeux sont fait.

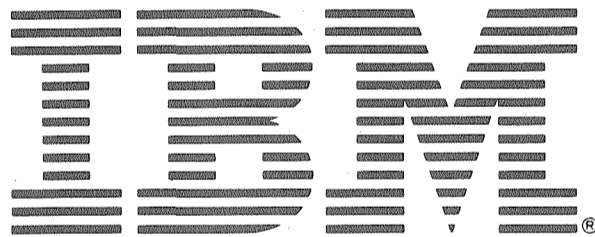

This week's problem: East serves, Northwest makes a hard second hit and the ball comes to you at South. Northeast and Southwest are vulnerable, what is your best play? [Hint: Don't forget the Rainbow Maneuver. Is it too risky?]

The Inside World

This Week's Inside World was written by:
Blackler: Walker Aumann
Fleming: Brian Duchovnay and Mark Humphreys
Lloyd1: Raif Majeed, Scott Harris and Randy Stevenson
Lloyd2: Jeff Hagen
Ricketts: Amitabh Mehra, Alex Sugiyama and Dan Weaver
Ruddock: Ericha Wunderlich and Heath Hunnicut

Lloyd: What the hell did you mean when you yelled "Blarnarnargar" into our dining hall Monday night? Were you all trying to say something? Was it in code? Did you have food in your mouths? Were you all just incredibly flustered at being out of your study cubicles at the unbelievable hour of 7:00PM?
Wow! I just fell asleep and had a weird dream. It was almost like a movie. It didn't even feel like a real dream.
Voice: "...are transmitting to the year 1,9,9..."
Then, a picture: In the doorway off of 1.5 stands a dark figure, tendrils of putrid mist wafting off of his malodorous figure. He is the Anti-Breath, the Wind Dragon.

we may have crushed like bugs. Careless and insensitive comments comments have no place in an Inside World. In appreciation, we are sending David a copy of the most recent Hair Club for Men pamphlet, a jar of petroleum jelly and a bottle of mineral water.
Blackler House, a fine place to herd cattle (Moo-OOOO), (No really, we have nothing against Moles, some of our best friends live in Blackler.) has maintained the excellent selection of Courtyard music. Members of the South Houses can barely contain their praise. Sophomore Amitabh Mehra claims, "I hadn't fully appreciated Queensryche until the 71st encore presentation this week. I don't understand why Moles move off campus."
For our readers in Up Four alley, there is a trendy new way of going to the computer room. Sacha Malin hopes her great circle route will catch on. "I go out into the courtyard, across to the east end of Cherry, up the stairs to Snatch, and down the alley to the computer room. It's the fastest way I know." We concur. At least Matt "Xen" Derer and Michael "I drug" Hoskins have adopted this hip new path. Since they live in Crud, they get to go through the courtyard twice. For the skeptics, we would like to point out that this route offers you the opportunity to drop by and say "Hi" to Nicole Eustance.

It is Friday, June 21, 1967. An old bitter corporate flunkee is sitting at his desk in some lightless back room in the basement of a fourty story office building. He is busily writing his suicide note, explaining that he was pushed over the edge by backmasked subliminal messages in John Denver music. Suddenly, he stops. Mid paragraph, mid sentence, mid thought, he stops. He clutches his throbbing gizzard and falls to his knees. His hands wither, his mind blanks, his throat constricts. His spleen swell
Is and explodes, and amidst the silence, his lifeless mouth whispers "... Why did I ever start drinking coffee in the first place?"
"Pete Dussin, you've just been told it will take you at least two more years to graduate. Now what are you going to do?"
"I'm going to Blackerland!"
Blackerland: Your 1990 Souvenir Guide

Rentals for those of our guests visiting from geriatric hospitals. (2) Guided Tours Garden Departure point for tours for those of you too clueless to find your way around by yourself. Just please don't step on Celine's flowers, even if they do talk back. (3) Carefree Corner
A place to hide from unwanted visitors, or just sit and discuss your problems with a panel of trained UCC's all waiting to serve you if they can only stay awake. (4) Mole Country
Not in my house. No need for televisions. No need for telephones. We should all be hunter-gatherers. (5) The Blackler Horse Story, featuring "Great Moments with Mr. Holland"
Fascinating bits of trivia about the horse and the world around us that you just can't believe the writers let go on and on.

Ruddock: So the other night I was sitting around with about nine tacos from Taco Hell in my stomach and two still in my throat and I started thinking: Is there any man manly enough to eat twenty of these sorry piles of meat surrogate? Then that obnoxious voice came out of nowhere again, speaking words of infinite wisdom as it occasionally albeit randomly produces: "No, but Charles can."
Duh duh duh duh duh. Duh duh duh duh duh. (Wayne's World)
Announcer: "Imagine, if you would, a land in which the inhabitants speak only in single words. ..."
Any Person: (Insert any word here.)
Chris Launey: "Care."
Person: "Old."
Announcer: "Look. Up ahead, on the sign - it says 'Welcome to the Launey Zone.'"
Duh duh duh duh duh. Duh duh duh duh duh.
BLARNARNARGAR.
How clever.

Top nine nauseating things in Ruddock this week:
9. Eating n tacos, where n is very large.
8. The "worst way to die" conversation in 4.5.
7. Fang and his wonderful excretions.
6. The "Is it milk or is it cheese?" morning treat in the dining room every day.
5. All and his wonderful regurgitations.
4. Jo and Nina GlomFest.
3. Dave Lin's guitar is fixed.
2. Berta and her pseudo-man frolicking in the computer room.
1. Spicy chicken gristle.

On the social front in Fleming House's social event is ... LAME, just like last week's, and the week before. Fucking social team. Why can't they pull their heads out of their asses and organize a social event?
a. Sluggish
b. Darby
c. Just Plain Fucking Boring
In a new spirit of constructive criticism the world we would like to suggest the following possible upcoming social events: Su with a UCLA sorority; Beer and "Anything."

we men should dress in the post-feminist age. Q: So how does one start to put together the successful wardrobe? A: What you are after is the existentialist look. Existence precedes essence, so its no longer good enough to be a cool guy but dressed like a slob. It's better to look good than to be good. The look makes the man.
Q: What should be avoided? A: Pants that terminate four inches above the shoes are out, as are T-shirts that say "My mom went to ..." God said "blank" shirts are out, as well as the Maxwell T-shirts. What sort of image does that present to a woman? Still on the subject of shirts, Sophomoric identity shirts, like the Red athletic shirts seen around campus are definitely passe. And even worse are the Black sweat pants with letters on the butt in combination with lame movie theme T-shirts. Any shirt with yellow on it is right out. Get some individual selection of Courtyard music, holding them scoreless. What the hell is going on?

Restaurants & Refreshments: (6) Burger Continental Plaza Gardens
Equisite cuisine featuring hamburgers, chicken, pasta, and chicken. Just watch out for the ants in the courtyard.
Adventureland:
Attractions: (1) Jungle Cruise
A mystery-filled adventure down the biological pathways of the world with your guide/punster G. Richard Benzing (the Third). (2) Greene Family Treehouse
The treetop home of Bill Greene built instead of doing Chem 41 like a good freshman would have.

Occasionally, one finds out the most unexpected people read the Inside World. This week, we discovered we have some regular readers who go to La Canada High School, in La Canada-Flintridge. So we would like to say hello to Gisele Rodriguez-Sandoval and Clark Chang. We would like to tell Gisele's friends and teachers that she is very stressed out from doing the college application scene. Please cut her some slack. Some gratuitous (SAT word) advice, always do your prelabs and read the lab manual before going to lab. By the way, interhouse is next week. Tell everyone.

It was an awesome week for the Maroon Machine. The Dann Scourves walked over the Big Red Machine, the Page Waiters, and the Umlauts on their way to the championships of the Boffo tournament before tying the Lloydeys in the finals. Just goes to prove we're turning into South Lloyds. Also, the Rickett's soccer team emasculated Buttock House, holding them scoreless. What the hell is going on?

Giants are kicking butt at 9-0, and the Pack is back.
Just to show that we're considerate people, we would like to point out that we didn't mention Erika Meyer at all this week.

"Good morning Cherry", I called out cheerily as I stepped through the 50 tonne pneumatic door.

"Hello Humper", she replied with a less-than-demure smile. I'm afraid W wants to see you now, but perhaps after, maybe we could. . .

"Now, now Cherry, you know I could never respect you in the morning", I said as I passed through another 100 tonne, rapidly closing door. Inside, behind his dark oaken Louis XIV desk, in his Recaro executive chair, looking even more worried than usual, sat W.

"Salutations, Staab. Sit. What do you know about a small idyllic school by the name of California Institute of Technology?"

"Well sir . . .", I paused, rapidly searching my mind for some hint of this hole-in-the-wall which W obviously thought I should know something about. "Small, too much work, too few women for health, and a new DAPAC policy."

"Exactly", W said with a smug smile. "That last bit has turned into a bit of a bother. It appears that our good friends there do not seem to take DAPAC as seriously as the rest of the free world. In fact, they are making a mockery of our ability to predict their behavior. I want you to go in and, well, resolve the situation. See J on the way out."

I rapidly exited his office and descended into the sub-sub-sub basement of the drab grey building which housed our organization. There, housed in a littered spot of laboratory, was J.

"Hello Humper, have I got something for you. Its the best. Look at this. It looks like a simple briefcase. Yet, behold, it's a bug. The bottom of the case is covered with yellow Zap. Just stick it on, and you can follow it with any 46" projection TV. Oh, and look at this. This is the best. It looks like a pen right? Wrong! It's an MX missile launching system. If you press the button, the pen comes out. But if you press it again you start World War III! One problem though, I can't get it to write after you fire it. The ink keeps drying out. I'm doomed."

My name is Staab, Humper Staab. My job? To quell resistance and restore authority anywhere in the world, by any means necessary. I make James Bond look like a pussy. My detractors say: If I'm not humping someone, I'm stabbing them. My fans say, well, I don't have any fans.

The Inside World

After getting equipped for my mission by J, I headed home to prepare for the more delicate aspects of the operation. Heading back to my flat, weaving through traffic in a rather crude but effective Aston Martin Vantage, I thought back on all the times I'd gone through the same drill. These DAPAC policies had certainly not been popular. Of course, the press immediately jumped on the bandwagon after the appropriate phone calls had been placed, yet still, there was resistance. I'd seen it all over the world. El Salvador, Afghanistan, Korea, East Berlin. Many good men had died ensuring compliance to the law. Were their deaths necessary? I'd like to think so.

On my way to the campus, I went over the details in my mind. I had to stay undercover, it would tough to mingle with the likes of the people I expected to find at Caltech. I left my HP-15C at home, thank you very much. I didn't leave my Kalishnakov 7.62 mm Starlight rifle, Colt 10 mm Delta Force side-arm, and assorted other lethal gadgets at home, however. As I saw the situation, there were three situations I had to deal with. Party violations, covert violations, and age violations. After checking into a rather dreadful hotel nearby, I showered, dressed and prepared to scout the territory I would soon be patrolling. First, of course, I rigged my room so I would know if anything had been disturbed. A hair placed across a doorway, some dust scattered across a door handle, objects arranged in a certain way. I wasn't expecting any trouble, but . . .

On campus I headed first to the dormitories. I knew this would be the place to start. It was a Friday evening, and I had that prickling in the back of my spine which always preceded trouble, or love. Coming close to a building, screened from sight by bushes and some lawn furniture, I used the scope of the rifle to scan across the windows. Most had curtains drawn. Switching the scope into a mode which the engineers at the factory had never dreamed of, the interiors of the shielded rooms leapt into clear focus. First room, nothing. Second, nothing. Third . . . My God! I counted twenty bodies in the room and at least a dozen bottles. I could almost hear the laughing from my perch 300 metres away. Forcing the bile down my throat, I raised the rifle and sighted carefully. The wind was from the north at about seven knots. I moved the muzzle half a centimeter to the right to compensate. The gun felt like a part of my arm. One shot to break the glass, the rest of the clip into the room. My finger gently squeezed the trigger; then squeezed it again, and again, and again . . .

(Next week, Humper meets Lisa Waitz and Karen Nilsen!)

MINUTES OF THE ASCIT BOD MEETING OF NOVEMBER 13, 1990

Present: The ASCIT BOD, Sonny Arcilla, Gavin Claypool, Cathy Hafer, and Eric Stout.

CLUE: Scott Kister did an awesome job on the presentation of the CLUE to the faculty board. ASCIT will be reimbursed for the CLUE and the faculty board wants to send one to every teaching professor.

Yearlong Offices: To ease the burden of the job, appointments for the little t editor and business manager should occur earlier in the year so some work can be done third term. This issue will be looked into.

Meeting With The Faculty: The next meeting will be December 4 at noon in Winnett Clubroom A.

Sonny: The tax thing is in place, but don't be alarmed if there are some problems. ADP does the tax thing at Pam's work and she wanted us to know that it works there. ADP will do ASCIT's tax thing until Sonny can find something cheaper.

The $32,000 loan from the institute for the new typesetter looks to be coming along OK. Chris Brennen wants an itemized list of all possible purchases to see if anything can be eliminated.

Sonny wants to modify the compensation schedule of The California Tech. The proposed modification is a small raise in the salary paid to the workers in charge of on-campus and off-campus distribution. Also, if a worker holds the job for a long enough time, he is rewarded for his "stick-to-it-iveness" with a promotion to "journeyman" which entails another raise. The BOD approves (7-1-0) this modification. For your info: Sonny does not hold either of these jobs.

ASCIT Budget: Pam presents an up-to-date budget and it appears that the budget for the year is being used as planned.

Y Dues: Eric Stout mentions that the Caltech Y is considering a $5/term dues for the Y. He would like ASCIT to hold an election so the ballot could include a referendum vote to determine the amount of student support for the proposed course of action.

Women's Volleyball Closes Winning Season

by Christy Esau

This year a women's undergraduate volleyball team was established in yet another first for Caltech's athletic department. Although not a member of SCIAC, the team has been practicing and playing in a GSC "B" league since mid-October under coach Karen Nilsen.

The team is young and inexperienced, with seven freshmen, two sophomores, and a junior, four of whom have never played competitive volleyball before. Freshmen Jennifer Trittschuh, Debbie Martin, and Esther Shao help out on defense, and Christy Esau has filled in as a setter. Maha Zewail has shown great promise as a hitter, and Jill Bush provides the height on the team. Katie Coughlin, a setter and a strong hitter has unfortunately been out the past few weeks with an injury. Sophomore Jen Yu and junior Em Naranjo have been strong on defense and two of the team's best hitters. Sophomore Taletha Derrington is both a setter and the top hitter.

In spite of inexperience, the undergrads are playing well in the GSC league, with a 4-1 record. In addition, they were invited to accompany the club team to Cal Maritime in Vallejo to play an exhibition match against a young Cal Maritime team, which they won handily. It was almost as exciting as messing around in San Francisco after the game. This is a building year for the team, but they hope to eventually play intercollegiately. It is unclear at this time just when that might happen, but two years is a realistic estimate.

The Undergrads' last GSC game will be Wednesday, November 28 at 7:30 against the Soft Underbellies, which is composed of several of the club team's players, and it should be a great game. Come cheer on the undergrads (we could use the support!) and see how volleyball should be played.

by Jeff Koshi

The Caltech women's club volleyball team finished off their season Nov. 3 in an exciting win against Mount St. Mary's College. Winning in straight games, the team brought their record to 9-6-1 for the year.

Led by coach Laurianne Williams and team captain Courtney Smith, the team pulled together from a disappointing start, playing some excellent volleyball in the second half of the season. Everything seemed to fall into place, and the team went 6-0-1 in their last 7 matches.

It was at the Cal Maritime Invitational in Oakland that the women seemed to find their spirit. Winning three matches and tying one, the team played tough throughout the entire tournament, and at the end found themselves the winners. In addition, Linda Rowan, displaying her perfect setting and powerful hitting, was declared the MVP of the tournament.

Returning from Cal Maritime, the team was definitely flying high. Their next two matches were tough, but the Caltech women refused to give up. Playing two teams that they had lost to earlier in the season, Loma Linda University and Christian Heritage, the team administered some revenge. Against Loma Linda, the game was close to the end: 15-8, 12-15, 15-9, 14-16, and 16-14. Later, an unidentified team member claimed they were only trying to keep the game interesting for the home crowd....

Regrettably, several players were injured in the latter half of the season. Katie Coughlin was sidelined at Cal Maritime with a twisted ankle, and Courtney Smith went down with the same injury at the Christian Heritage match. But the club team hung on and finished out the season at Mount St. Mary's, to close the first winning season in recent memory.

Soccer Says Thanks

THANK YOU!

As most of you probably already know, last month the Caltech Soccer Club won a local tournament against UC Riverside, Peperdine U., and Cal State Long Beach, and, thereby, qualified to participate in the National Collegiate Club Soccer Association Championship in Austin, Texas, on November 16-18, 1990.

In order to cover some of the expenses in this trip, financial help was sought from different organizations on campus and at JPL, including the Graduate Office, the Athletics Department, GSC, the Caltech Y, Burger Continental / Caltech Food Service, and JPL ERC. We are pleased to announce that this fund raising activity helped us collect $1792!

Also, a raffle was organized, and ticket sales generated a net profit of $1334. We would like to mention that the raffle would not have been fruitful without prize donations from The Athenaeum, Burger Continental, The Red Door Cafe, Carl's Sports and Tennis, The Haircutters, the Ticket Office, Caltech Graphic Arts, Caltech Bookstore, and CCO. Also, we would like to thank Dr. H. Hornung and Mr. P. Noca for their generous contributions.

Finally, we would like to express our gratitude to those who participated either directly or indirectly in the effort of sending the Caltech Soccer Club to nationals. The story of our expedition will be narrated in a later issue of the California Tech. Stay tuned!

Opening lead: K♦

Some things change in bridge while others stay the same. The game in which this hand was played at the Red Door Cafe on Monday was a stratified game. In a stratified game, novices play against experienced players as well as other novices. If they beat everyone, they win the overall award. However, if experienced players win the overalls, then the novices can still win the distinct novice stratification. This has the advantage of increasing master point awards for everyone and allowing new players to learn quicker by playing against knowledgeable players while still also competing separately against pairs of their own ability. This is a new addition to the world of bridge.

However, some parts of the game of bridge have been with it since its inception. In Bath, England long before bridge was invented, whist players used the Bath Coup, which means holding up the play of the ace when the jack is held in the same suit. We can see this in today's hand; when East signals a doubleton with the ♦8 and South holds up his ♦A, if West continues the diamond suit with either a low or a high diamond, he gives away the contract.

South is not out of the woods yet. This is not Bath, and West heard the bidding so he switches to the ♣Q. Declarer pauses for a moment to think: if East gets the lead before trumps are drawn, he will lead the ♦3 and kill the contract. East is dangerous and must be kept off lead. So the ♣A is called from the dummy followed by a trump.

South intends to finesse the ♠J and will be home free—he wins any return, exits ace and another spade and claims.

While South was thinking, East saw his hand. Declarer did not hold his cards up enough so East knew drastic action was necessary. On the lead of the spade from the board, East played his Queen! Now South must win the ♠A at once or else East will set the contract. If Declarer exits with a low spade immediately, he will be doomed. East will knock out the diamond and West will cash the ♦Q before South can pitch his ♦J. Declarer calmly played the ♠J! West must have the ♠K for his 2♦ call so South does not take a bath for his slip.

Cross Country Finishes Season

by Chris Campo

San Dimas: home of Raging Waters; home to Bill and Ted; and, more importantly, home to Bonelli Park, the site of the NCAA Division III Cross Country West Regionals.

In the sport of Cross Country, the lower a team's score is, the better that team places. Caltech's score on Saturday, November 10, was 169. This did put the Battlin' Beavers ahead of Menlo College (198), Cal State San Bernardino (201), and La Verne (incomplete team). It also unfortunately put these same Beavers behind Occidental (23), UC San Diego (86), Whittier (94), Pomona-Pitzer (113), Redlands (117), and Claremont-Mudd-Scripps (126).

The course was eight kilometers (about five miles) of dusty hills, searing stretches of asphalt, and a soft, sandy beach. Temperatures were high and so were the times. Aaron Matzner was unsuccessful in his bid for a National Qualifying time, but finished first for the Beavers with a time of 28 minutes flat.

Aaron has been plagued with upper leg muscle soreness and with a masochistic courseload, both of which have taken their toll on the 3-2 transfer from Whitman College. Aaron, in spite of the heat, workload, and muscle soreness, finished 17th in a field of 63 runners.

Dan "Terminator" Flees finished quite respectably in 28:24, only 24 seconds behind his teammate Aaron. The Terminator was not completely satisfied with his 25th place finish. "I crushed some of the guys who beat me today last year," the junior year runner remarked. He'll be returning next year to shoot for a national qualifying spot.

Finishing 39th and 41st places respectively were seniors Scott Kister and Chris Campo. The pair ran together throughout the race, finishing 13 seconds apart. Kister (29:47) remarked "I felt tired the whole way out there... It wasn't one of my better days."

Newcomer to the team Andy Zug was next for the Beavers, finishing in 30:59. When asked what he thought of the Bonelli course, he replied, "Hills Suck!"

The sixth man for the Beavers was Mark Lyttle. Lyttle, who did not sport his customary ponytail, finished in 32:07, good for 54th place. "I think this race finally taught me that going out fast early in the race is not a good thing," reflected a pensive Lyttle after the meet.

The seventh man for Tech, finishing in 33:01 at 56th place was Win Chamberlain. Chamberlain, a sophomore, will be back to battle for the Beaver's next year.

Coach Jim O'Brien said of the men's performance, "I think our performance was a positive thing. Given the conditions I don't think there's any way we could have done better than we did."

Although the Beavers were able to field what was perhaps the strongest team in the past four years at Caltech, 1990 was unfortunately the year in which the SCIAC conference as a whole has become the strongest it has been in recent years.

Now for some Beaver Trivia:

1. Member of the team who most resembles a Beaver: Mark Lyttle.
2. Member of the team who will sport a Beaver costume of the Caltech Rose Bowl float: Amy Hansen.
3. Member of the team with the most rad Beaver paraphernalia: Kurt Storm and his stuffed beaver hat with a flop-down tail.
4. Name for victims of the Caltech Cross Country team: Beaver Bait.
5. Lines to the Caltech Cross Country chant, recited prior to the start of races: "Beavers, Beavers slap your tails (clap, clap, clap) slap your tails (clap, clap, clap)!"

Craig went by me like a blur.

don't know if I can go back and race as just one of the pack. I don't know if I can be an age-grouper again. Next year is the Ironman. That's all I'm doing. I don't care what happens. That's my main goal." The Ironman, as you may have heard, is made up of a 2.4 mile swim, a 112 mile bike and a marathon - all through the scorching lava fields of Hawaii. "I'm going to Kona. Going to Kona."

Come and see Craig at Sunday's First Annual Homeboy Biathlon, a tough-as-nail race through the scorching fields of the Rose Bowl. The biathlon starts at 10 am, and the ASCIT van will be shuttling people there from the corner of San Pasqual and Holliston at 8:30 and 9:30 AM.

Caltech Biathlon

by Chris Campo

This Sunday the First Annual Caltech Biathlon will be held at the Rose Bowl at 10 am. The biathlon will consist of a three mile run, followed by an eighteen mile bike portion, and will finish with another three mile run.

Anyone interested in participating is welcome. The level of competition is not fierce, and we will mainly be out there to have fun. After the race there will be free food, and run-bike-run splits will be available along with finishing times to all finishers.

If you are interested in participating, you can leave a message on Scott Kister's answering machine at 796-3220, or you can just show up to the parking lot on the southwest portion of the Rose Bowl loop before 10 AM on Sunday. For more information call Chris Campo at 449-4626.

We are looking for as many people to participate as possible, including any grad students, faculty, or JPLers who wish to come. Relay teams of a runner and a biker are also welcome. If you are a runner or a biker and don't have a relay partner, call us up and we'll provide you with one.

Some of the people we'll be expecting to see out there: Sam

Clark, Tim Maddox, Delwyn Gilmore, Aaron Matzner, Aimee Smith, Lisa Waitz, Mark Lyttle, John Pham, Jason MacLeod, Lee Burrows, Ned Bowden, Craig Reynolds, Kevin Gilpin, Andy Zug, Win Chamberlain, Mike Ida, Kurt Storm, Becky Green, Craig Reynolds, Andy Wells, Coach O'Brien's triathlon class, and anyone else who'd like to do this for fun or time the event.

Transportation: We will have the ASCIT van leaving from the corner of San Pasqual and Holliston at 8:30 and 9:30 AM on Sunday morning. If you are a cyclist you are encouraged to ride down to the Rose Bowl (you can throw your stuff in the van and we'll take it down there for you), but if you don't want to ride down there, or if you are a runner, you can get a ride with the van. The van will also be ferrying people back to Caltech after the event.

Show up to find out:

1. Will Craig beat the relays this time?
2. Will Chris shave his legs to go faster?
3. Who will have their head shaved: Ned or John?
4. Will Zug stomp on everybody but Craig?
5. Will anybody come?
